The following is the entire known American ancestry of William Hathaway's wife, Sarah Lawson, of Enon Hall Plantation, Lancaster County, Virginia. This couple were the first Hathaway owners of Enon Hall.

Virtually all of the research for this lineage was done by Sandy Diggs and Diane Wilson of Matthews County, Virginia and by the author, who also did the analysis. Lyndon H. Hart III of Richmond also kindly contributed the important Carter v. Pinckard lawsuit. While this research was conducted over several years, it was compiled by the author for the submission of supplemental lineages on the author's membership in the Society of Colonial Wars from the following ancestors: William Hathaway, Lieut. Henry Lawson, Rowland Lawson II, Rowland Lawson, and Simon Sallard. The lineage to all five and their respective service were approved by the Society's Registrar General, Timothy Field Beard, F.A.S.G.

In addition, one published genealogy asserted that Simon Sallard's father-in-law, John Taylor, was the same person as the John Taylor who came to Virginia aboard the Swan in 1610.¹ No basis was, however, given in support of this claim. The author, with the assistance of Sandy Diggs, researched this possibility in 2005-2007 and discovered that the record evidence, in fact, creates a very compelling case for this identification.

The consolidation of the forgoing materials into this document was made in 2007 for its inclusion on the Enon Hall Plantation website.

In the format below, the substantive information is presented in bold, and the bracketed remarks below each such item list the documents and provide the analysis, if any, needed to establish the information contained therein. Information that is extracted from a particular source, and/or other significant details pertaining thereto, is enclosed by the following: "{ }." Maiden names are used exclusively, unless the name is directly quoted from, or is a title of, a source. When an individual's initials are used, they refer only to the appropriate ancestor named in the lineage and not necessarily to people with the same name referred to in the proofs: such abbreviations will only be used after the particular point in the lineage where the ancestor's name first appears. To prevent confusion among individuals with the same name, Roman numerals will appear after each name to denote different generations, even though the named individuals were never so identified.

The author and William Hathaway Chapman, who are fifth-great grandsons of Lieut. Lawson Hathaway of Enon Hall, are Generation 1, for purposes of the generation numbers presented below. Sarah (Lawson) Hathaway, from whom this study begins, is Generation 9.

recorded 13 September 1762, Lancaster Co. VA Lancaster Co. VA Deed Book 16, pages 233-34 (“Donaldson/Hathaway Deed”){documents the purchase of the 200 acres for £100}

In his 1771 deposition, WH stated that he was born in March of 1706/7 and that, as a boy, he regularly went to a mill in Lancaster County for his uncle, Dr. Robert Gibson—implying that he lived with him. His statement is confirmed by two additional records. First, the lawsuit of Hathaway v. Gibson documents William’s claim against the administrator of Francis Hathaway’s intestate probate estate—his uncle Robert Gibson—for his part of it, (presumably) as one of Francis’s heirs. Since Francis died in 1719, there was no reason for William to wait eleven years until 1730 to assert his claim, unless he were under age until close to that time. Thus, both the filing and the nature of this suit suggest that William had come of age recently, indicating his birth by 1709—a fact that is confirmed by the reference to him in the second document, which was his godmother Mary Phipps’s will made that year.

The fact that WH had a godmother in Lancaster County within two years of his birth, that Francis Hathaway died in this county just ten years after his birth, and that he apparently lived with his uncle Robert Gibson in this county as a boy suggest that he was born there, in spite of his subsequent residence in Essex County. His identity as the William Hathaway of Essex County is established by the Hathaway/Man Deed, which identifies the conveyor’s wife as Sarah—consistent with WH’s wife identified in his will: it is very unlikely that there would have been another couple so named in Virginia at this time, given the sparse number of Hathaways in the colony. The re-establishment of WH’s residence in Lancaster County is documented by the Donaldson/Hathaway Deed, which identifies this county as his residence. It also records the purchase of the land upon which Enon Hall was to be built, on Nantipoison Creek.³ And it was at Enon Hall that he gave his deposition in 1771.]

William Hathaway's pivotal involvement with the 1755 Estate of Henry Lawson, Gent. ("HL"), the conveyances to him and his children in the Will of Ann Lawson, his role as the executor of that will and of the Will of Henry Lawson, Jr., and the fact that he named his eldest son Lawson constitute sufficient circumstantial evidence that his wife Sarah was the daughter of HL. Land and Tithables records confirm that HL was the same Henry Lawson who married Mary Sallard, widow of John Kelly, and that all of his children, including Sarah, were born of wife Mary.

William Hathaway's Wife Sarah Was The Daughter of HL.

The 1755 Estate of HL indicates that each "childs part" was to be distributed, but it does not identify them. However, the fact that Elizabeth Briscoe and "Ms. Ann Lawson" filed objections to having two of their slaves included in the Estate is evidence that they were two of HL's children. Their objection is also significant because it suggests that they were not HL's only surviving children. If they were, there have been little reason for them to object as they would have each received half of the estate. But that would not be the case if there were additional heirs because HL's personal estate would have been equally divided amongst all them—thus, depriving the two daughters of the full value of their slaves.⁵

Elizabeth Briscoe's identification as one of HL's daughters is confirmed by her marriage bond to Robert Briscoe in 1727, in which, as "Elizabeth Lawson," she was identified as the daughter of "Henry Lawson." One of the sureties for this bond was, notably, "Henry Lawson, Jr."

Since the 1720 & 1746 Tithables records only reveal two Henry Lawsons in Lancaster County in each of these years, it is probable that Henry Lawson, Jr. was HL's son. This probability is increased by the fact that Henry Jr. still went by "junior" when he wrote his will in 1751, indicating that this designation was linked to HL, who was still alive.⁶ Moreover, the fact that Henry Jr. named William Hathaway as the executor of his will adds to the weight of this evidence because it was Hathaway who also served as the administrator of HL's estate four years later.

Additional evidence is found in the 1761 will of HL's unmarried daughter "Ms." Ann Lawson, in which she devised all of her property to the following: Winifred Lawson & her daughter Mary Lawson, "William Hathaway Senr.," James Hathaway, Elizabeth Hathaway, John Briscoe, Sarah Briscoe, and Henry Lawson. Since Winifred was the widow of Henry Lawson, Jr., per his 1751 will, it is clear from the bequests to her, her daughter Mary, and her presumed son Henry that Henry Jr. was testator Ann's brother and a son of HL.⁷

The significance of Ann's will, however, goes beyond the clarification of this relationship. Ann also devised property to John and Sarah Briscoe. Per Elizabeth Briscoe's 1756 indenture to her children, this John Briscoe was clearly her son John, and Sarah was obviously her daughter, who was identified by her nick-name "Sally" in the indenture.

Ann also made bequests to James, Elizabeth and William Hathaway "Senr."⁸ James Hathaway was obviously William Sr.'s son of that name. Elizabeth Hathaway was likely a daughter of William Sr.: her relationship is suggested by her marriage bond to Bartley James in late 1763, ⁵Sir William Blackstone. Commentaries on the Laws of England. A Facsimile of the First Edition of 1765-1769. Chicago & London: The University of Chicago Press, 1979. In 4 Volumes ("Blackstone"). Volume 2, pages 514-15 {describes intestacy law for descent of personal property}.

⁶It was common for the designations of "senior" and "junior" to rotate between generations, in the colonial period: so, one who was known as "junior" at one time may later become "senior" after his father's death and after he has a son or nephew by the same name, who became the new "junior."

⁷The devisee Henry is listed without any "junior" designation as the two older Henrys—HL and Henry, Jr.—were both dead by this point.

⁸He was designated "senior" to distinguish him from his son of the same name, who Essex County records establish was an adult by 1762 -63 and who was named in Hathaway's will.

which was witnessed by a known son of William Sr., John Hathaway. The fact that so many members of William Sr.'s family were given bequests by Ann is very significant and implies a blood relationship with his family.

William Sr.'s most significant involvement with the Lawsons, however, was his service as the administrator of HL's estate. He was so appointed after he "came to Court & made oath" that HL died "without making any Will as far as he knows or believes." The fact that Hathaway was able to make such a statement is strong evidence of his close relationship with HL. When this evidence is combined with the fact that Hathaway was of the right generation to be a son-in-law of HL, that his eldest son was named Lawson, plus his involvement with the estates of Henry Lawson, Jr. and Ann Lawson, and Ann's bequests to two of his children, the overwhelming weight of this evidence is sufficiently strong to warrant the conclusion that William Hathaway's wife Sarah was HL's daughter. (In fact, Elizabeth Briscoe's daughter Sarah was likely named for her.)

So, HL's known children are: Henry, Jr. who married Winifred; Rowland (see below); Sarah who married William Hathaway; Elizabeth who married Robert Briscoe; and Ann who never married.

HL Is The Henry Lawson Who Married Mary Sallard.

Ordinarily, one would not expect that HL, who died by 1755, would be the same Henry Lawson who married Mary Sallard, widow of John Kelly, over five decades earlier.⁹ Nonetheless, the Deposition of Henry Lawson establishes that to be the case: HL testified that he was 74 years old "or thereabouts," in 1752, and that he had married Mary Sallard, who was the widow of John Kelly and the daughter of Elizabeth Taylor Sallard.

Land records confirm the reliability of the aged HL's testimony. The 1720 Lawson/Kelly & Lawson/Lawson Deeds establish that a Henry Lawson, of the right generation to be HL, married Mary Sallard, widow of John Kelly. The former deed conveyed half of a 250 acre tract from her family to son John Kelly with reversions to her other sons, Rowland Lawson and Henry Lawson. In the latter deed, Mary retained a life estate in the other 125 acre half of this tract, with sons Rowland Lawson and Henry Lawson as alternate remaindermen. That same year, the Tithables records reveal only one Henry Lawson in Lancaster County, who was the head of a household, and he was obviously Mary's husband.

In the following year, 1721, the Quit Rent Roll reveals that this Henry was taxed for 375 acres of land, and John Kelly was taxed for 125 acres. The latter acreage was obviously the half of the Sallard tract conveyed to Kelly in the Lawson/Kelly Deed. Kelly subsequently conveyed an extended lease in this land to the Hunton family in 1724. The other 125 acre half was obviously a third of Henry Lawson's 375 acre total, for which he was taxed due to Mary's retention of the life estate in this acreage. The remaining 250 acre balance was Henry's own land.

By the 1740s & 1750, the Tithables and Quit Rent Rolls establish that there were, as before, two Henry Lawsons over age sixteen, but only "Henry Lawson Sr." was listed as owning land—250 acres. Notably, the fact that Henry Jr. was living in Henry Sr.'s household at the time all but confirms that he was the senior Henry's son.

Henry Sr.'s listing with only 250 acres in 1746 is consistent with his wife Mary's death by this point. At her death, her life estate in the 125 acre balance from the Lawson/Lawson Deed would end, and this acreage would pass to her son Rowland Lawson in entail, with alternate reversions to her other sons if he died without issue. So, it is reasonable to conclude that Henry's wife Mary had died by 1746. In fact, as noted below, she died at least four years before that, by 1742.

One probable reading of these records is that Mary Sallard's husband Henry was the Henry Lawson who was still living in 1750 and who appeared in them back to the 1720s. They, thus, provide independent evidence verifying HL's statements in his deposition. Consequently, HL was Mary Sallard's husband Henry Lawson.

Mary Sallard Was Sarah Lawson Hathaway's Mother.

It is notable that HL did remarry after his wife Mary's death. In 1742, HL, "who [had] married the widow & admin^rx of Walter Heard dec^d," moved that an accounting of Heard's "Instate Estate" be made and that the Estate's Negroes be divided between the widow and Heard's children. The requested disposition of this estate and the reference that HL had married the widow Heard both imply that he had recently married her. This marriage would have been too late for HL's second wife to be the mother of any of his children.

As noted, HL's first wife Mary Sallard had previously been married to John Kelley, by whom she had at least two children—John Kelley, Jr. and Blanch Kelly, per the depositions and Jury Verdict in Carter v. Pinckard. In his deposition, the younger John Kelley testified that he was 53 years old "or thereabouts" in 1752—putting his birth circa 1699. However, emphasis must be placed upon the "thereabouts" qualifier: both he and his sister had to have been born by the time of their father's death, which had occurred by the commencement of his intestate probate in 1690/1.

Mary then married HL between this date and ca. 1700, since her two known sons by him were deeded land interests without a guardian in the 1720 Lawson/Kelly & Lawson/Lawson Deeds—implying that they may have been of age at that time. Life expectancy probabilities confirm not only this conclusion but also suggest that HL's other children would have been close in age to these two siblings. Consistent with the fact that few people lived much beyond age sixty, HL's son Henry Jr. died by 1752, and daughter Ann died in 1761. Daughter Elizabeth's marriage to Robert Briscoe in 1727 is, likewise, consistent with her birth occurring not too many years removed from 1700. Similarly, William Hathaway was born in 1706/7, and it is reasonable to presume that his wife Sarah would have been close to his own age. That being the case, she would also have been close in age to HL's other children. It is, therefore, unlikely that any of HL's children were born much after ca. 1710. Since Mary Sallard was still alive in 1720, she was HL's wife at the time that all of his children were likely born, and his marriage to his second wife was, consequently, much too late for her to be their mother.

The strength of this evidence is more than sufficient to justify the conclusion that HL and wife Mary Sallard were the parents of Sarah, wife of William Hathaway.]

Baltimore: Clearfield Company, Inc., 2000 reprint, pages 12-13 {land devised to wife for life then to Elizabeth, daughter of Epaphroditus Lawson}

Rowland Lawson II’s father, Rowland Lawson, patented a total of 1,700 acres in Lancaster County—in tracts of 1,300 acres and 400 acres respectively. The 1655/6 assignment by Rowland to his brother Richard and Richard’s 1655/6 patent establish that the 400 acre tract was conveyed to Richard shortly after it was issued to Rowland. Richard’s will establishes that this land did not return to Rowland’s heirs, as it was devised to their deceased brother Epaphroditus’s daughter Elizabeth Lawson.

As his father’s eldest son, Rowland II inherited the remaining 1,300 acre tract. He then deeded half of it to his underage brother Henry in 1668/9, which was to return to him if Henry died without issue. Rowland II also deeded another unspecified portion of this tract to his younger brother John. Subsequently, in 1699, Rowland II patented 24 additional acres at Mosquito Point. In his will, Rowland II devised an unspecified western portion of his land to his son Henry. Since no other land bequest was made in his will, Rowland II’s eldest son Rowland III inherited the balance of his property by operation of law.¹⁰ In a 1712 deed, Rowland III conveyed 50 acres of this land, where he then lived, to Henry Lawson.

The only land-owning Lawsons in Lancaster County at the time of the 1721 Quit Rent Roll were Henry with 375 acres, Rowland III's widow Jane with 900 acres, and John's son Epaphroditus with 200 acres—for a total of 1,350 acres (not including the 125 acres included under Henry for his wife Mary's life estate, as discussed in Generation 10 above). Since Rowland III obviously inherited the majority of his father's 1,300 acre patent and since the only Henry Lawson at the time had 375 acres—only 250 of which came from the Lawson family—it is clear that Rowland II's brother Henry died without issue. Since the only other land-owning Henry Lawson who could have been alive in 1721 was Rowland II's younger son, it is clear that HL was this individual.

Thus, Rowland II's 1,324 acres was divided as follows. Son Rowland III inherited 950 acres, but 50 of these acres were conveyed to brother Henry in 1712. This acreage was part of Henry's 250 acre holdings. Finally, the balance of Rowland II's land was the unspecified portion that he deeded to his brother John. Since John's eldest son Epaphroditus was taxed for 200 acres in 1721, it is clear that some, or all, of this acreage originally came from Rowland II. Thus, the total of the Lawson family's Lancaster County landholdings documented in the 1721 Rent Roll was just 26 acres greater than Rowland II's 1,324 acres that were distributed by deed and through probate. (In all likelihood, the 24 acres at Mosquito Point was rounded up to 25 acres, and the remaining 25 acre difference was an unrelated acquisition by John or John's son Epaphroditus.)

Consequently, Rowland II's total holdings are accounted for, and there was no other Henry, other than Rowland II's son Henry, who could have been HL.]

The forgoing date is based upon HL’s known birth and the fact that he had an elder brother. RL II’s wife survived the making of his will, but no record identifies her first name.

Her identity is, however, suggested by HL’s cryptic remark in his deposition: he refers to land in the possession of his “Uncle Pinckard’s Grand father.” The earliest Pinckard in Lancaster County was Capt. John Pinckard, who died in 1690. He registered a land patent in 1687 claiming headrights for himself and children John, Jr. and Mary. Since no headright was taken for a wife, it is probable that the mother of his children had already died in Britain. His wife in Virginia, Elizabeth, was not the mother of his children—since John Pinckard, Jr. was identified as her “Sone in Law”–or step-son.

Capt. Pinckard’s son Thomas made his will in 1740 and was apparently an adult when his father devised him land in 1689/90. That Thomas was probably born not much earlier than ca. 1670 is consistent with the fact that his sister Rebecca married Charles Sallard, and Sallard’s sister Mary (see below) was also born in this same time period. For these reasons, it is likely that Capt. Pinckard was probably born ca. 1640–making him the same generation as RL II. Capt. John Pinckard is, thus, the only individual who could be the “Uncle Pinckard” referred to by HL in his deposition.

Since Capt. Pinckard was the first Pinckard in Lancaster County, it is clear that the “Grand father” to which HL referred was likely the grandfather of Capt. Pinckard’s second wife Elizabeth, since this individual owned land in Lancaster County. While Elizabeth’s maiden name and Lancaster County origins have not yet been established, she was apparently the sister of RL II’s wife and HL’s mother.

It is worth noting that HL’s relationship with the Pinckard family cannot come through his wife Mary Sallard’s family. Despite the fact that Mary’s brother Charles Sallard (see below) did marry one of Capt. Pinckard’s daughters, Mary’s lineage is sufficiently documented to rule out any connection.

It has been suggested that RL II married a daughter of James Chaplin, who devised all of his estate to RL II and his brother John Lawson. The fact that RL II was left most of the estate could indicate that RL II did marry a possible daughter of Chaplin. However, the fact that RL II’s brother John was also left a bequest suggests that Chaplin’s connection to the Lawson family went beyond just RL II’s wife.]

--Lawson/Lawson Deed {deed conveyed the other 125 acre half of the tract referred to in the Lawson/Kelly Deed to Epaphroditus Lawson as trustee—Mary to have a life estate in said land and, upon her death, it was to revert to her son Rowland Lawson in entail, with subsequent contingent reversions to her sons John Kelly and, in turn, Henry Lawson}

Both the Jury Verdict and the Depositions of John Steptoe, Henry Lawson, John Kelley, & Nicholas Martin, in Carter v. Pinckard, state without question that HL’s wife Mary was one of the three children of Elizabeth Taylor by her first husband, Simon Sallard.

These later records are verified by several records dating from the time of the events discussed. First and foremost is the 1679 Sallard/Baker Deed, in which widow Elizabeth Taylor Sallard conveyed 900 acres to her three children by Sallard, including Mary, just prior to her pending second marriage to Thomas Baker. Since both of her two daughters still had their maiden names, neither had married by this point. The two daughters were to split 500 acres, and they were only to take possession of their respective halves upon “the Day of marriage or when they come of age.”

By 1689, daughter Mary had married John Kelley, since he petitioned for her 250 acre share of her mother Elizabeth’s holdings, now due per the terms of the Sallard/Baker Deed. In the 1720 Lawson/Kelly & Lawson/Lawson Deeds, as previously noted, two halves of this 250 acre tract were conveyed in entail to two of Mary’s three sons, with reversions to her other sons. These deeds, therefore, confirm that Elizabeth Taylor Sallard’s daughter Mary was the same Mary Sallard, who eventually married HL and was the mother of his children.

So, HL’s wife Mary Sallard was the daughter of Elizabeth Taylor by her first husband Simon Sallard.]

LANDHOLDINGS: 1,000 acres in Isle of Wight & Lancaster Cos. VA

[The documentation and analysis is set forth below. Taylor had 50 acres that he patented in Isle of Wight County in 1637. Since he likely died in that county, this land had probably not been sold when he patented the 950 acres in Lancaster County, just before his death.]

In the 7 February 1624/5 Muster for Elizabeth City appears:

John Taylor aged 34 in the Swan 1610
Rebecca Taylor aged 22 in the Margett and John 1623¹⁴

Since only a “Mrs. Taylor” at Martin’s Hundred is named in the 1623/4 Lists of the Living and the Dead,¹⁵ John Taylor and possibly his wife Rebecca were either missed in that census or were abroad when it was taken.

John Taylor appears in two different records in McIlwaine’s Minutes of the Council and General Court. A deposition of John Taylor of Elizabeth City, age 37, was given on 23 June 1625 regarding cattle belonging to Sir Thomas & “Lady” Dale (MCGC 73-74). John Taylor also appears in a muster of men from Berkeley Hundred, then “planted at sherley hundred,” which was noted in the 3 January 1624/5 session of the Council (MCGC 38). If this John Taylor were a different individual, then he apparently died or returned to England shortly thereafter, as the only John Taylor in the 1624/5 Muster was the aforementioned Elizabeth City resident.

On 20 September 1624, John Taylor of Newport News (in what later became Warwick County), “Yeoman & Ancient Planter,”¹⁶ patented 50 acres in the Parish of Kiccoughtan, Corporation of Elizabeth City “being one half of his first devdt.,” in the Taylor Patent. This patent indicates that he had not yet taken up the other half of this 100 acre patent right. An 8 November 1633 note at the end of this patent indicates that he was given leave of Court to surrender this 100 acre right in Elizabeth City so that he could “take it up where hee shall.” He was also granted leave to claim an additional 50 acres for the transportation of his wife, Rebecca Ravening, provided that he could prove that she paid her own passage in the Bonny Bess (or Mary & John) in 1623.

It is clear from this patent’s addendum that John Taylor intended to use his patent rights in another part of Virginia. Surviving patent records reveal only one patent issued to a John Taylor near the time of the 1633 court order: a 50 acre patent was issued to this John Taylor for land in Isle of Wight County on 22 November 1637, for his “personal adventure.” Two days earlier, on 20 November 1637, Thomas Harwood patented 100 acres in York County, on the New Poquoson River. The right to 50 of its acres had been assigned to him by John Taylor and was due to Taylor for “his per. adv.” Notably, New Poquoson River is not far from where Taylor was living in 1624/5.

¹⁵Lists of the Living and the Dead, 1623/4, transcribed in John Camden Hotten. The Original Lists of Persons of Quality 1600-1700. Baltimore: Clearfield Company, Inc., 1996 reprint of 1874 original, page 181.

¹⁶Those who had settled in Virginia by 1616 and who paid their own passage were able to claim a right to 100 acres provided that they had resided in the colony for three years at the time the application was made. Such individuals were contemporaneously designated as “Ancient Planters” (1 APP xix).

These patent records likely involve John Taylor the Ancient Planter for the following reasons. First, the latter patent involved land that was close to where Taylor was living in 1624/5 and could, therefore, easily involve half of the 100 acres released in 1633. The fact that Taylor was due the assigned patent right for his “personal adventure” supports this conclusion. Second, the other 50 acre half is accounted for by John Taylor’s Isle of Wight County patent. The fact that this patent was issued in 1637 is consistent with the beginning of the patent process a year or so after 1633, since, on average, it took two to three years to complete the process—and sometimes longer.¹⁷ Significantly, this patent right was also based upon this John Taylor’s “personal adventure.” Third, this patent is the only surviving land patent claimed by a John Taylor between 1624 and 1648.¹⁸ Since it is unlikely that the Ancient Planter would wait until 1648 to re-use his patent rights, it is reasonable to conclude that he was the Isle of Wight County patentee.

Finally, a move by John Taylor the short distance up the James River from Elizabeth City to Isle of Wight County is consistent with documented settlement patterns. Land patent records establish that Isle of Wight County experienced a significant increase in settlement beginning in 1635. At least three known early Virginia families, who lived in Elizabeth City at the time of the 1624/5 Muster, are known to have settled in Isle of Wight County—two within just a few years after 1635 and the other a few years later. The first was Joseph Cobb, who patented 400 acres in the county in 1637.¹⁹ He came to Virginia in 1613, and was an Ancient Planter, even though no “record now surviving” identifies him as such.²⁰ The second individual was Cobb’s brother-in-law, Farrar Flinton, who came to Virginia in 1612.²¹ The third was the Lupo family. Brothers Albiano, who like Taylor came in the Swan in 1610, and Philip, who came in 1621, were living in Elizabeth City when the Muster was taken. Philip’s son, Philip, subsequently settled in Isle of Wight County.²²

A fourth individual, Robert Newman, came to Virginia in 1618 and was also in Elizabeth City at the time of the Muster. In fact, it was in his Muster that John & Rebecca Taylor appeared at that time.²³ Presumptively, it was this Robert Newman who patented three tracts of land on the Nansemond River in 1636 and 1637—in Upper New Norfolk (later Nansemond) County, which is adjacent to Isle of Wight County and directly across the James River from Warwick County.²⁴ Described in one patent as a “Planter of Blunt Point,” in Warwick County, Newman patented land in that county in 1639/40 not far from where Taylor had previously lived.²⁵ The fact that the man, with whom John Taylor previously lived, patented land in the late 1630s very near the county in which Taylor also patented land at the same time is noteworthy. A move by John Taylor from the Elizabeth City/Warwick County area to Isle of Wight County in the mid 1630s is, therefore, consistent with the settlement patterns documented by these four individuals/families.

The fact that John Taylor was not specifically identified as an “Ancient Planter,” in the 1637 Isle of Wight County patent, does not preclude his identification as this individual. Again, Joseph Cobb’s 1637 Isle of Wight County patent is illustrative: even though one of its eight headrights was for his own “personal adventure,” Cobb was not identified as an “Ancient Planter” in this patent. It is possible that Cobb’s personal headright of 50 acres may be a use (or re-use) of half of the land that was due to him as an Ancient Planter, or it could have been earned for a return trip from Britain instead. The potential for the former is, however, significant given the lack of any surviving records regarding the 100 acres due to Cobb as an Ancient Planter.

Further, the claim for 100 acres as an “Ancient Planter” need only be made once. Once land was received under that legal right, which ostensibly would be for the claimant’s own “personal adventure,” any re-use of the patent rights did not necessarily require the repetition of the Ancient Planter status. It appears that may have been the situation with Joseph Cobb. Thus, once John Taylor was vested with the 100 acre right and it was released to him for use elsewhere, the fact that Isle of Wight County patentee Taylor was not specifically identified as an Ancient Planter is of little significance. Indeed, since he is likely the same John Taylor who sold the 50 acre right to Thomas Harwood, then his entire 100 acre grant as an Ancient Planter can be completely accounted for.

Notably, the name John Taylor does not appear in any surviving Isle of Wight County record from the seventeenth century, and very few other Taylors do as well. Since few of this county’s records predating 1662 survive, patentee John Taylor likely either died in the county or moved away prior to this year. One additional patent record makes the latter possibility by far the most likely, for at least his family. On 28 May 1638, Sarah Cloyden, widow, patented 200 acres in Isle of Wight County. Two of its headrights were for John Taylor and Tobias Horton.²⁶ Given the sparsity of Taylors in this county at the time, this John Taylor is likely the same as the Isle of Wight County patentee. If so, he sold Cloyden a headright earned either for a return trip from Britain or, more likely, for the 50 acres due for wife Rebecca Ravening's transport, per the 1633 patent order. This patent, then, leads to another settlement pattern.

In 1651, Lancaster County was formed, and its area was opening up for settlement. Two of its most distinguished early families were the Carters and the Lawsons, who settled in what became Christ Church Parish. Both families had moved to this county from the Isle of Wight and Nansemond County area. Col. John Carter, father of Robert "King" Carter, had settled on the Nansemond River by 1643 and was in Lancaster County by 1652.²⁷ Brothers Epaphroditus and Rowland Lawson settled on the New Town Haven River by 1636, in what was then Nansemond County but later became Isle of Wight County.²⁸ Similar to Carter, they and their brother Richard Lawson first appear in Lancaster County in 1651 and 1656 respectively.²⁹ In addition, Hugh Brent appears as a headright in an Isle of Wight County patent and then settled in Lancaster County by 1649.³⁰

Moreover, Robert Newman also settled on the Northern Neck, in adjoining Northumberland County, by 1651.³¹ He left a will in this county in 1655 and is the only Robert Newman identified by Torrence leaving a probate estate in seventeenth century Virginia.³² Given the relative rarity of his name and the fact that the Robert Newman of the Elizabeth City Muster was born ca. 1600, it is reasonable to conclude that these Robert Newmans are the same individual.³³ The fact that this individual lived in the same household as John Taylor at the time of the 1624/5 Muster, patented land near Isle of Wight County in the late 1630s, and then was an early settler in the Northern Neck is very significant because John Taylor followed this same pattern.

The Jury in Carter v. Pinckard concluded that the three Lancaster County land patents for 950 acres, dating to November of 1652 (of which only one survives), were granted to Elizabeth (Taylor) Sallard's father, John Taylor (hereinafter "JT"). Even though he died within months of this time, the three tracts making up this total acreage were repatented in his name in 1662/3, in patents that do survive. A century later, in November of 1752, seventy-eight-year-old Hugh Kelley gave his deposition and stated:

that John Taylor father of the aforsd M^{rs}. Sallard he has heard lived upon the James River . . . [and] never lived in . . . [Lancaster] County and that he has heard M^{rs}. Sallard Daughter of the s^d. Taylor was brought up from James River by one Horton who married the Mother of the s^d. M^{rs}. Sallard to Musketo point where she lived in a Small home [adjoining the land of Tobias Horton].

JT's estate records confirm that the "one Horton" who married his widow was Tobias Horton. Kelley gave his unidentified "mother in law" as the source for this information.

If Kelley's statement can be believed, then it constitutes direct proof that JT did, in fact, come from the James River area—consistent with his residence in Isle of Wight County. Kelley's comment that Taylor did not himself ever live in Lancaster County is potentially contradicted by the fact that JT's "relict" Elizabeth filed the petition to commence his intestate probate estate in that county on 10 January 1652/3. This filing could be explained by her move to the county and the fact that most of Taylor's probable assets—his 950 acres—were located there. Even if he did die in this county, the overall reliability of Kelley's testimony regarding JT is not impugned by such a relatively minor inconsistency. This testimony was completely extraneous to the issues upon which Kelley was testifying—which dealt with the boundaries and subsequent title history of a portion of Taylor's land. Consequently, Kelley would have had no motive to fabricate it. Indeed, Kelley's statement that JT came from the James River area is consistent with the well documented settlement pattern set forth above.

It is, therefore, notable that JT's estate is the earliest Taylor probate record in Virginia discovered by Clayton Torrence, in his extensive study of Virginia probate records prior to 1800.³⁴ Also notable, JT's land in Lancaster County was adjacent to that of Tobias Horton's, in the Fleet's Bay area—as documented by Kelley's deposition and the patents issued to Toby Horton, Gervase Dodson and George Whale.³⁵ Another prior Isle of Wight County resident and early Lancaster County settler, Hugh Brent, also owned land adjacent to Horton.³⁶

JT's Isle of Wight County origins are further suggested by two additional records that complement Hugh Kelley's testimony. The first are his estate records, which reveal that one of his creditors was early Lancaster County resident, Abraham Moone. Since the only other early Moone in Virginia was John Moone, from Isle of Wight County (see 2 APP 677-79), it is possible that Abraham also was originally from Isle of Wight County. If correct, then JT would likely have incurred his debt to him in that county—especially if Kelley is correct that JT never resided in newly-settled Lancaster County.

JT's prior residence in Isle of Wight County is further supported by the second record—the 1653/4 Will of Robert Chambers of Lancaster County. This man, with expressed New England ties, devised a cow to “Mrs. Tayler in consideration of her charge & indeavour [sic] to cure” him of his “Infirmities.” The cow was, significantly, in the possession of Anthony “Fullyham,” and he was undoubtedly the Anthony Fulgham, who left a will in Isle of Wight County in 1678, as Torrence reveals no other individuals with this unusual name at the time.³⁷ The fact that JT's widow had ostensible ties with this Isle of Wight County resident, albeit through Chambers, is significant.

These two records coupled with the close association between JT's family and Tobias Horton in both Lancaster County and Isle of Wight County are very significant. Indeed, these appearances in two different regions of Tidewater Virginia are too remarkable to be a coincidence. It is, therefore, reasonable to conclude that JT was the same John Taylor who appeared in Mrs. Cloyden's Isle of Wight County patent and who patented land in this county in 1637. Since the evidence is also sufficient to conclude that this John Taylor was the Ancient Planter, then his first wife Rebecca had obviously died, and he had remarried to wife Elizabeth. His birth ca. 1590 would make him about 62 years old when he died by 1652/3, which would be in line with life expectancies in Virginia at this time.

Another John Taylor patented land with James Jones in 1664 between branches of the Wiccomico and Corrotoman Rivers.³⁸ Notably, it was clearly this John Taylor who, together with Jones and one other individual, patented land in Northampton County, on Virginia's Eastern Shore, in 1648.³⁹ While the first of these patents involved land not far from JT's land, this patentee cannot be JT because the evidence in the Carter v. Pinckard suit all but indicates that the 950 acres patented by JT in 1652 was the only land that he owned in this area, and it is unlikely that a patent for new land would have been taken out in his name, in 1664, so many years after his death.

Moreover, research in the Taylor Article reasonably establishes that this patentee John Taylor lived in Northumberland County, was age 30 in 1657/8—as stated in a Northampton County Court record involving Jones, married Alice Gaskins, and left a will proved in 1702.⁴⁰ His birth in ca. 1627 conclusively establishes that he was not the Ancient Planter, since the latter was born ca. 1590.

The Taylor Article also documents another early John Taylor, who died intestate in Northumberland County in 1667 leaving a son William. The late date of his death makes his identification as the Ancient Planter extremely unlikely, since the Ancient Planter would have been nearly eighty years old at that time.

In 1669, JT's under-age son, Richard Taylor, died intestate without issue while en route back to Virginia from Britain "aboard ye ship ffrienship of London." Since his probate record indicates that his sister Elizabeth's husband was his sole heir, it establishes that she was JT's only surviving child and that there were no surviving issue of any other predeceased child. This record also reveals that Richard left 950 acres Fleet's Bay. This land was clearly the 950 acres in the same locality that was originally patented by JT and which the Carter v. Pinckard lawsuit indicates passed to Elizabeth and her descendants. It was, presumably, this land that was referenced in the foregoing deed and patents of Toby Horton, Gervase Dodson and George Whale mentioning the land of the deceased John Taylor. Simon & Elizabeth Sallard then sold a 17 acre portion of this total to Thomas Lawrence, and the deed specifically states that the 450 acre tract, out of which it was taken, had been originally patented by John Taylor.⁴¹ Elizabeth conveyed the approximate 900 acre balance to her three children in the Sallard/Baker Deed.

The fact that Richard was under-age in 1669 establishes that he was born no earlier than 1648, which was less than five years before his father's death. It could, therefore, be argued that the relatively late births of JT's daughter Elizabeth, who was born between 1637/8 & 1644, and son Richard suggest that JT was relatively young when he died. Such a conclusion, then, would arguably rule out his identification as the Ancient Planter, since that John Taylor was born ca. 1590. However, it was not unheard of for men in their fifties to have children with much younger wives. In fact, the Ancient Planter was 12 years older than his wife Rebecca Ravening, and, if the age gap with wife Elizabeth were just a few years wider, she could be the mother of these children.

⁴¹Deed from Simon & Elizabeth Sallard to Thomas Lawrence, 11 March 1677/8, Lancaster Co. VA Deed Book 1666-1682, page 286 abstracted in Duvall at 56-57 {16 acres of a 450 acre patent of John Taylor was conveyed}

For instance, the Christ Church (Middlesex County) Parish Records establish that Christopher Sutton (1678/9-1737) had children by wife Hope Beaumont who were born between 1704/5 and 1732—a span of nearly thirty years, with his last child born when Sutton was 53.⁴² Thus, Richard Taylor’s birth within five years of his father’s death does not weaken his father’s identification as the Ancient Planter, and such a late birth would be explicable if his parents had been married before.

Record evidence establishes that to be the case for JT’s wife Elizabeth. Following his death, she married Tobias Horton, as the Record of cows due to the Orphans of John Taylor & William Winterborne and the Administration of Horton’s estate establish. The former record documented Elizabeth’s confession that her husband Horton held cows “belonging to the Orphths. of John Taylor & Willm. Winterborne both long since deced.” Her involvement in this proceeding all but indicates that, before Taylor, she was married to Winterborne.⁴³

This conclusion is confirmed by the fact that, per the 1669 Estate of Tobias Horton, she had a “Sonne in Law,” Uriah Angell. As noted, Richard Taylor’s Estate establishes that his sister Elizabeth (Taylor) Sallard was his sole heiress in 1669. Thus, Angell cannot have been married to another child of John Taylor, since Taylor’s only surviving heir was Elizabeth Sallard. The term “son in law,” at this time, was used to refer to a step-son as well as its modern meaning.⁴⁴ The latter is more likely here because Elizabeth conveyed Angell her one-third interest in JT’s land.⁴⁵ She would not likely have been so generous if Angell were a mere step-son. So, it is reasonable to conclude that Angell was married to a daughter of Elizabeth by her marriage to a husband other than JT. Her marriage to Tobias Horton is not a possibility because Horton only names one daughter in his will, Rebecca, and she was married to Thomas Martin.⁴⁶ Also, Angell’s only known wife was named Susannah. Thus, the relationship must arise from a marriage that Elizabeth had prior to JT, and William Winterborne is the only candidate.

⁴⁵Although this conveyance does not state that the interest conveyed was a mere life estate, that is what Elizabeth’s dower one-third share would have been. See Blackstone at 128-39.

Consequently, the fact that Elizabeth had an earlier marriage with children before her marriage to JT explains why she had her two known children by him so close to his death and suggests that she was relatively old at the time. Since JT would likely have been at least as old as his wife, it is reasonable to conclude that he too was relatively old when these two children were born and that it was possible for him to have had an earlier marriage as well. These facts are, therefore, consistent with his identification as the Ancient Planter.

The overwhelming weight of available evidence is sufficiently strong to establish that John Taylor, Ancient Planter was the 1637 Isle of Wight County patentee of the same name. Due to the lack of other known John Taylors in the latter county, his identification as the John Taylor named with Tobias Horton in Mrs. Cloyden's Isle of Wight County patent is also reasonable. This John Taylor was, without question, the John Taylor who patented land in Lancaster County in 1652 and whose estate was probated there in 1652/3 because of his documented ties with Horton. Moreover, Hugh Kelley's testimony confirms this John Taylor's relationship with Tobias Horton dated from his family's residence in the James River area. This John Taylor is, thus, by far the best—and is indeed the only—candidate revealed in surviving Virginia records to be the Ancient Planter.]
